Squares, Stripes, and Lice
25 Traditional Knitting Designs from Bergen, Norway
Ann Kristin Ramstrøm

One of the oldest textile factories in Norway, Salhus Tricotagefabrik operated outside Bergen for over 130 years, producing thousands of sweaters, socks, and other knitted garments. Today, the factory site houses a heritage museum dedicated to preserving the building and grounds—and to storing, cataloging, and exhibiting a remarkable collection of machine-knitted sample pattern swatches dating back to 1910. The technical limitations of knitting machines of the day gave rise to motifs with strikingly distinctive features: done in two colors or relief stitches, with small easy-to-work repeats and a dynamic sense of geometry. Now, using museum samples to reconstruct dozens of these timeless vintage patterns for inspiration, we have this unique collection. Dive into a detailed introduction to Salhus Tricotagefabrik, including historical photographs and personal reminiscences from the knitters and seamstresses who worked there; and discover sweaters, jackets, skirts, home décor, and more, for children and adults, combining the best of both worlds: bold, retro designs, and flattering contemporary shaping and cut.
